France Burns for 11th Night

Chirac promises to restore order as police, rioters clash

PARIS | French President Jacques Chirac promised arrest, trials and punishment on Sunday for those sowing "violence or fear" as an 11th night of urban violence across France got under way, with police and rioters clashing south of Paris and in other towns.

Ten riot police were injured, two seriously, in fighting with 250 to 300 youths in Grigny, south of the capital, the Interior Ministry said. Officials believe rioters may have fired with a hunting rifle. Across the country, rioters pelted Molotov cocktails at cars and a school, and firefighters in some areas worked under police escort.

The previous night, youths set ablaze nearly 1,300 vehicles and torched businesses, schools and symbols of French authority, including post offices and provincial police stations. The violence spread to Paris for the first time.

"The law must have the last word," Chirac said in his first public address on the violence. France is determined "to be stronger than those who want to sow violence or fear, and they will be arrested, judged and punished."

From an outburst of anger in suburban Paris housing projects, the violence has fanned out into a nationwide show of disdain for French authority from youths, including the children of Arab and black Africans angered by years of unequal opportunities. ANGELA DOLAND (AP)

Prisoners Unearth Ancient Church

UNCOVERED: Israeli prisoners clean dirt off a mosaic in the ruins of an ancient Christian church on Sunday. Archeologists say the site, on the grounds of the high-security Megiddo Prison, could be the oldest public place of Christian worship ever uncovered in Israel and perhaps one of the earliest such sites anywhere. The floor was found Oct. 30 by a prisoner working on behalf of the Israel Antiquities Authority. ❖ Rare find: Officials hail unusual ancient site | Page 8

BUYING AND SELLING

That's Enough Money To Open a Strip Club

The owner of a Painesville, Ohio, strip club said he has a six-figure offer from a church to buy and shut down the joint. Bill Martin, owner of Just Teazin, has been the target of protesters who object to the club, which he defends as a legitimate business protected by the U.S. Constitution. "I'm a strong believer in the U.S. Constitution. Until we become more like the Taliban, I don't see why people have a problem with upholding the Constitution," he said, adding that a church bought a former club of his, re-selling it for use as a homeless shelter. WHOOOPS

Not What They Cement to Do

Windward Oahu, Hawaii, workers accidentally filled several manholes with concrete Oct. 13 after mistaking them for abandoned sewer lines — resulting in raw sewage being forced into many homes, KITV-TV reported. After realizing the mistake, the workers began building an emergency pipe with jackhammers—but not before the sewage began flooding nearby houses and a parking lot. "You could smell what it was right away. It was nasty," said Liz Asteriadis. The city blamed the manager of a nearby housing complex for passing along bad information. (EXPRESS)

Shobha became the first woman ever to blow up a regular hot-water bottle until it burst — an activity that falls squarely into the "Things You Have Never Thought About Doing" category. The "Impossibility Challenger" event, revived this year and held over two days, gave participants the chance to break records in various non-Olympic feats. (EXPRESS)

Running Loose

A Detroit thief was tripped up by his baggy pants, falling twice before being caught. James Green took about six DVDs from a video store Oct. 30, and initially made his getaway on a bicycle. Officers spotted him in an alley, and he abandoned the bike and ran, but his pants fell to his ankles and he tripped. He kicked off his pants and shoes and then jumped a fence into the backyard of a house, where he was captured. (AP)

Tornado Splinters Homes in Ky., Ind.

At least 22 people dead as twister packing 158 mph winds hits 2 states

EVANSVILLE, IND. | A tornado tore across western Kentucky and Indiana early Sunday, killing at least 22 people as it cut through a mobile home park and obliterated trailers and houses as residents slept.

The tornado, with winds of at least 158 mph, hit a horse racing track near Henderson, Ky., then jumped into Indiana around 2 a.m.

"It was just a real loud roar. It didn't seem like it lasted over 45 seconds to a minute, then it was calm again," said Steve Gaiser, who lives near the Eastbrook Mobile Home Park in Evansville.

At least 17 people were killed in the mobile home park, according to Eric Williams of the Vanderburgh County Sheriff's Department.

More people were believed to still be trapped in the debris, and

ALL THAT REMAINS: Kegan Russel, left, and Michael McKenzie clean up debris after a tornado destroyed McKenzie's home early Sunday in Evansville, Ind.

National Guard units were called in to help with search-and-recovery efforts. At least 200 people were injured during the storm.

Rescuers on the scene since 2 a.m. reported seeing children wandering the area looking for their parents and parents searching for missing children. Children's bicycles and other toys were strewn amid the debris of aluminum siding, mattresses, chairs and insulation.

Five other people were confirmed dead in neighboring Warrick County, east of Evansville, where the Ohio River city of Newburgh was hit. No deaths were reported in Kentucky.

The storm reduced homes to splinters and scattered debris across the countryside. Entire blocks of buildings were nothing but rubble.

Indiana homeland security spokeswoman Pam Bright said about 100 of the 350 or so homes in at the Evansville mobile home park were destroyed and 125 others there were damaged. DEANNA MARTIN (AP)

Dems: Release Prewar Intel

Push continues for report on information that led to war in Iraq

WASHINGTON | A government document raises doubts about claims al Qaeda members received training for biological and chemical weapons in Iraq, as Senate Democrats on Sunday defended their push for a report on how the Bush administration handled prewar intelligence.

Democrats forced the Senate into an unusual closed session last week as they sought assurances the Intelligence Committee would complete an investigation of intelligence about Iraq before the U.S.-led invasion in March 2003. Republicans said the session was a stunt and that the report, after nearly two years, was nearly complete. They did agree to appoint a bipartisan task force to review the committee's progress and report by Nov. 14.

"We cannot have a government which is going to manipulate intelligence information. We've got to get to the bottom of it," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Kennedy

Newly declassified portions of a document from the Defense Intelligence Agency showed that the administration was alerted that an al Qaeda member in U.S. custody probably was lying about links between the terrorist organization and Saddam Hussein's Iraq.

The document from February 2002 showed that the agency questioned the reliability of al Qaeda senior military trainer Ibn al-Shaykh al-Libi. He could not name any Iraqis involved in the effort or identify any chemical or biological materials or cite where the training was taking place, the report said.

Biden: No Filibuster Likely on Alito

WASHINGTON | A Democratic member of the Senate Judiciary Committee said Sunday he believes the Senate will decide on Samuel Alito's Supreme Court bid without resorting to delaying tactics.

"My instinct is we should commit," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., minimizing prospects of a filibuster, an extended debate intended to stall nomination hearings, that would prevent final action on President Bush's choice to replace retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

"I think that judgment won't be made until the bulk of us have had a chance to actually see him and speak to him.

Biden

But I think the probability is that (a vote) will happen," Biden said on ABC's "This Week."

Confirmation hearings for Alito, now a judge on the Philadelphia-based 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, begin in the committee on Jan. 9. Some Democrats have raised the prospect of a filibuster until they get a fuller sense of his views on abortion and other social issues on which O'Connor has been a swing vote. (AP)

Senate Eyes 'Puppy Mills'

Lawmakers to weigh tougher rules for mass sellers of purebred dogs

GAP, PA. | The colorful, hand-painted signs offering puppies for sale at farms in scenic Lancaster County only add to the allure of Amish country. Some visitors cannot help but go home with a fluffy dog.

But animal activists say many of these seemingly innocent farms are actually a front for lucrative, virtually unregulated operations that crank out hundreds of purebreds, sometimes amid miserable conditions.

A Senate subcommittee this week hears testimony on legislation that would give the Agriculture Department the power to regulate breeders and dealers who sell directly to consumers. Some breeders worry that the bill will place unneeded regulations on them.

Pennsylvania, which some have called the "Puppy Mill Capital of the East," is not alone in the problem, according to animal rights groups. The Humane Society of the United States lists it with Arkansas, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma as the worst violators.

FOR THE DOGS: A litter of golden retriever puppies scamper at Mountain View Kennels in Williamsburg, Pa. — a respected breeder. The kennel's owner worries a crackdown on inhumane "puppy mills" will make it harder to run her business.

The Animal Welfare Act, passed in 1967, set standards for the treatment of animals by breeders, exhibitors, transporters and researchers. It exempts "retail pet stores," and large breeding operations are considered retailers by the USDA if they sell directly to consumers.

Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., says that changes to the Animal Welfare Act are needed to protect not just animals but consumers who buy dogs with behavioral and health problems. His bill would give the Agriculture Department authority over those who sell more than 25 dogs per year.

Lori Rhodes, who operates Mountain View Kennels in Williamsburg, Pa., said she hates the large breeding operations. But federal regulation, she said, would mean more work for her kennels. "It's unfortunate for the small business man that the puppy mills are making it bad on everybody," she said. (AP)

Maverick Trailing in San Diego Mayor's Race

SAN DIEGO | Voters fed up with San Diego's financial mess and political corruption came within a whisker of electing surf-shop owner Donna Frye as mayor on a stunning write-in campaign a year ago.

Now the Democratic councilwoman is in a runoff for mayor — but the city doesn't seem quite as enamored of her this time around, despite her bigger campaign budget and more polished image. With the election on Tuesday, she's trailing Republican former Police Chief Jerry Sanders, who has the backing of the city's business establishment.

Frye may have hurt her chances in the nonpartisan race by backing a tax increase in this city known for fiscal conservatism.

The winner will have the task of fixing a $1.37-billion pension fund shortfall that has set off federal investigations of City Hall, reduced the city's ability to borrow money and fueled talk of municipal bankruptcy. The pension mess led Mayor Dic Murphy to leave office in July, seven months into his second term. ELLIOT SPAGAT (AP)

In San Francisco, Ballot Items Draw Little Interest

SAN FRANCISCO | Proposals to ban handguns and prevent military recruiters from visiting schools would seem like surefire hits with voters in peace-loving San Francisco.

But days before Tuesday's election, two ballot measures dealing with these typically passion-provoking topics face uncertain fates. One would prohibit the sale of firearms and ammunition. The other would oppose — in word only — the presence of military recruiters at public high schools and colleges.

Most political observers think the measures will pass Tuesday, but they have sparked so little interest and debate that even the most seasoned pundits cannot say for sure. (AP)

Youths Find Outlet for Rage in Riots

Paris violence brings poverty, racism of suburbs into clear view

SAINT DENIS, PARIS | They move in packs at night, burning and wrecking. Their anger is both blind and targeted. They torch their own neighborhoods as well as symbols of the French state that some feel oppresses them.

Whatever their motivation, youths leading the violence that in 10 nights has spread across France sow fear, anger and frustration among their fellow residents of "Les Cites" — grim, public housing estates on the outskirts of French cities heavily populated by poor Arab and black Africans.

Some officials suspect the unrest that reached into Paris proper early Sunday has in part been instigated by gangs hoping to turn their neighborhoods into no-go zones for police so drug trafficking and racketeering can thrive.

But the roots are broader than that. Racism and joblessness among minorities have left young people of the slums languishing in hopelessness, creating the tinderbox of anger that has exploded.

The violence is forcing France to confront the long-simmering anger in its suburbs. They are fertile terrain for crime of all sorts as well as Muslim extremists who recruit frustrated youths.

Sonia Imloul, who works with troubled teens in Seine-Saint-Denis, said youths often feel trapped.

"It is very, very difficult to leave this place," she said. "There is a stigma attached to being a resident of this place."

Families break down in the pressure-cooker of crime and unemployment. Imloul estimated 40 percent of families in the suburbs where she works are dysfunctional, causing a high rate of school dropouts and crime. SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI (AP)

HOLY FIND: A prisoner cleans part of an ancient Christian mosaic floor Sunday that was recently discovered in northern Israel.

Prisoner Stumbles on Ancient Ruins

MEGIDDO PRISON, ISRAEL | Israeli prisoner Ramil Razilo was removing rubble from the planned site of a new prison ward when his shovel uncovered the edge of an elaborate mosaic, unveiling what Israeli archaeologists said Sunday may be the Holy Land's oldest church.

The discovery of the church in the northern Israeli town of Megiddo, near the biblical Armageddon, was hailed by experts as an important discovery that could reveal details about the development of the early church in the region. Archaeologists said the church dated from the third century, decades before Constantine legalized Christianity across the Byzantine Empire.

"What's clear today is that it's the oldest archaeological remains of a church in Israel, maybe even in the entire region. Whether in the entire world, it's still too early to say," said Yotam Tepper, the excavation's head archaeologist.

Israeli officials were giddy about the discovery, with Prime Minister Ariel Sharon calling the church "an amazing story."

Two mosaics inside the church — one covered with fish, an ancient Christian symbol that predates the cross — tell the story of a Roman officer and a woman named Aketous who donated money to build the church in the memory "of the god, Jesus Christ."

Iraqis Flee Latest U.S. Offensive

Street battles erupt during sweep through al Qaeda stronghold

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Scores of terrified Iraqis fled a besieged town Sunday, waving white flags and hauling their belongings to escape a second day of fighting between U.S. Marines and al Qaeda-led militants along the Syrian border. U.S. and Iraqi troops battled insurgents house-to-house, the U.S. military said.

The U.S. commander of the joint force, Col. Stephen W. Davis, told The Associated Press late Sunday that his troops had moved "about halfway" through Husaybah, a market town about 200 miles northwest of Baghdad.

At least 36 insurgents have been killed since the assault began Saturday and about 200 men have been detained, Davis said.

Residents of the area said coalition forces warned people by loudspeakers to leave on foot because troops would fire on vehicles.

U.S. officials have described Husayba as a stronghold of al Qaeda in Iraq, led by Jordanian Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. (AP)

In Brazil, Bush Takes Aim at Chavez

President uses speech to urge Latin America to choose democracy

BRASILIA, BRAZIL | President Bush didn't name names Sunday when he called on Latin Americans to boldly defend strong democratic institutions and reject any drift back to the days of authoritarian rule.

But his remarks were a clear jab at Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez. The leftist leader and friend of Cuba's Fidel Castro spent the past two days hurling criticism at the United States at the Summit of the Americas in Argentina.

Eying three upcoming presidential elections in Latin America, Bush said citizens must choose "between two competing visions" for their future.

FORGING BONDS: President Bush and Brazil's President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva depart Lula's country house near Brasilia, Brazil, Sunday after talking to reporters.

Bush also urged Brazil to use its regional influence to prod into reality a U.S.-backed Free Trade Area of the Americas. Bush believes such a free-trade zone stretching from Alaska to Argentina would create jobs and lift the region's 220 million poor to better lives.

Bush had good reason to make his push for freer trade and a better image for the U.S. here. Brazil has influence with Venezuela and in Bolivia, where the leading candidate in the Dec. 4 presidential election is the founder of the Movement Toward Socialism political party.

The president's visit was also expected to cement relations with Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, the leader of a country that represents a lucrative market for U.S. products that Bush would like to expand. DEB RIECHMANN (AP)

Chaos in Somalia Stirs Attacks on Cruise Liner, PM

NAIROBI, KENYA | The violent attack on a cruise liner off Somalia's coast shows pirates from the anarchic country on the Horn of Africa are becoming bolder and more ambitious in their efforts to hijack ships for ransom and loot, a maritime official warned Sunday.

That gang is one of three pirate groups on the coast of Somalia, which has had no effective government since opposition leaders ousted a dictatorship in 1991.

Illustrating the chaos, attackers in Somalia's capital, Mogadishu, threw grenades and exploded a land mine Sunday near a convoy carrying the prime minister of a transitional government that has been trying to exert control since late last year. (AP)

THE BUSH EFFECT: Despite his decline in the polls, President Bush will try to push a fellow Republican, Virginia gubernatorial candidate Jerry Kilgore, over the edge to victory with a campaign rally at the Richmond airport this evening.

Va. Gov. Campaign Hits Fever Pitch

With 1 day left before vote, Kaine, Kilgore stump across state

GRUNDY, VA. | The president of the United Mine Workers union exhorted a crowd of about 150 to rally behind Democrat Tim Kaine as the gubernatorial candidate and his ticket mates continued a campaign swing through Virginia's coal-mining region Sunday.

"We built the middle class down here and we're not prepared to give it up," said Cecil Roberts, a native of southwest Virginia.

Roberts noted that President Bush will make a campaign appearance in Richmond with Kaine's opponent, Republican Jerry Kilgore, on Monday night, less than 12 hours before the polls open.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Tim Kaine, left, shares a laugh with Pilgrims Knob resident Jesse Horn on a campaign stop on Sunday in Grundy, Va.

"What's Jerry Kilgore doing? Standing on the stage with somebody who wants to take your Social Security," Roberts told the crowd.

Kaine, who is winding up a four-year term as lieutenant governor, is stressing the economy, education and transportation in his campaign.

Republican Jerry Kilgore shakes hands leaving a church in Vienna, Va., Sunday.

Kaine was joined by Democratic attorney general candidate Creigh Deeds, lieutenant governor candidate Leslie Byrne and former Gov. Linwood Holton, a Republican and Kaine's father-in-law.

Meanwhile, Kilgore spent a low-key morning attending two church services in Northern Virginia. He was not introduced at the McLean Bible Church in Vienna, and most of the nearly 2,500 worshippers seemed unaware of Kilgore's presence.

"You don't come to church to be recognized every time — you come to meet people and renew old friendships," Kilgore said as he walked into the church.

After the service, he stood outside and greeted departing parishioners, including Sen. Elizabeth Dole, R-N.C., who spent a few moments chatting with him. "I'm all for Kilgore," she said as she walked to the parking lot, declining further comment.

Steele Still Needs to Finish Study on Death Penalty

Maryland Lt. Gov. Michael Steele said he is still working on a formal report on the state's death penalty. The Republican who is running for U.S. Senate, made a campaign promise nearly three years ago to address racial bias in the state's use of capital punishment. Gov. Robert Ehrlich signed a death warrant on Friday for Wesley E. Baker, the death row inmate whose execution was stayed in 2002 to give researchers time to study racial and other inequities in the way the state handles the death penalty. (AP)

County police said they found the four people Saturday suffering from gun shot wounds at the Culture Club on Saint Barnabas Road. Authorities suspect that a fight started inside and continued into the parking lot, where several rounds were fired. (AP)

New Director Determined To Move Beyond Zoo's Past

A month after taking charge at the National Zoo, the new director said Sunday he was determined to move the zoo beyond its past management problems and animal deaths. John Berry — formerly the executive director of the National Fish and wildlife Foundation — took over his new post on Oct 1. Before Berry's arrival, a series of animal deaths at the zoo led to greater scrutiny from Congress and an investigation by the National Academies' National Research Council. Animal care had improved after an initial report, according to zoo investigators. (AP)

Va. Transit Riders Feeling Crunch

Ridership on trains, buses grew last year to 128 million trips

ARLINGTON, VA. | More Northern Virginia residents are taking a stand for public transportation — literally.

Morning commutes aboard the Virginia Railway Express are often standing room only as that system reaches capacity. Many bus routes are that crowded now too.

It's no wonder. Overall public transportation ridership grew last year to 128 million trips for northern Virginia residents — up 3.3 million from a year earlier. The figure from the Northern Virginia Transportation Commission includes VRE, Metro and eight local bus systems.

While public transit usage increased nationwide, the jump in northern Virginia was nearly double the national average.

"It's a stunning statistic," said Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Gerald E. Connolly.

"With enough resources, we could significantly expand that." He said gridlock is the reason people are turning to mass transit.

In neighboring Loudoun County, Cheyenne Cashin of Sterling is careful to be at her bus station 10 minutes early to make sure she gets one of the 55 reclining seats for her 45 minute trip to the Washington, D.C., law firm where she works. Ridership on the Loudoun County bus system grew 31 percent last year and has nearly doubled since 2003.

"I just don't want to fight the traffic. It's just too much stress. I like having my time to read or take a nap," said Cashin, a bus rider since the late 1980s, before Loudoun County took over the program.

Arlington County's ART bus service saw ridership grow with 116,000 more trips.

The Fairfax Connector buses had half a million more passenger trips.

The only service that didn't grow dramatically was VRE, which officials warn is at capacity.

Ehrlich Trails His Democratic Rivals

BALTIMORE | A new poll shows Gov. Robert Ehrlich is behind his two chief rivals in the race for governor with about a year to go before the 2006 election.

Baltimore Mayor Martin O'Malley leads Ehrlich by 15 percentage points, 48 percent to 33 percent, according to a Baltimore Sun poll conducted by the independent, nonpartisan firm Potomac Inc.

Montgomery County Executive

Douglas Duncan has a 5 percent-age point lead on the governor but has gained little ground on the mayor in the weeks after the two Democrats' formal entry into the governor's race.

In a primary matchup, O'Malley leads Duncan, 42 percent to 23 percent, a 19-point spread that has barely budged despite the Duncan's high-profile campaign announcement and statewide tour. (AP)

Sending Mixed Signals

At MIT, new maps can reveal where – and who – Wi-Fi users are NETWORKS | In another time and place, college students wondering whether the campus cafe has any free seats, or their favorite corner of the library is occupied, would have to risk hoofing it over there.

But for today's student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, that kind of information is all just a click away.

MIT's newly upgraded wireless network — extended this month to cover the entire school — doesn't merely get you online in study halls, stairwells or any other spot on the 9.4 million square foot campus.

It also provides information on exactly how many people are logged on at any given location at any given time. It even reveals a user's identity if the individual has opted to make that data public.

IN TOUCH: With the school's electronic maps of its wireless network, MIT student Jose Expinosa doesn't have to wonder where he can find a seat to use his laptop.

MIT researchers did this by developing electronic maps that track across campus, day and night, the devices people use to connect to the network, whether they're laptops, wireless PDAs or even Wi-Fi equipped cell phones.

The maps were unveiled this week at the MIT Museum, where they are projected onto large Plexiglas rectangles. They are also available online to network users, the data time-stamped and saved for up to 12 hours.

Red splotches on one map show the highest concentration of wireless users on campus. On another map, yellow dots with names written above them identify individual users, who pop up in different places depending where they're logged in.

While every device connected to the campus network via Wi-Fi is visible on the constantly refreshed electronic maps, the identity of the users is confidential unless they volunteer to make it public.

Rich Pell, a 21-year-old electrical engineering senior, was less than enthusiastic about the new system's potential for people monitoring.

"I wouldn't want all my friends and professors tracking me all the time. I like my privacy," he said. "Everyone wants to be out of contact now and then." BROOKE DONALD (AP)

Translation Technology Gets Digital

PITTSBURGH | Imagine this: You want to whisper something to a co-worker in Spanish, but you can't speak the language. So you simply mouth the words in English, and they immediately pop up in Spanish on your colleague's computer.

The premise may seem far-fetched, but researchers are working toward making it a reality. As Carnegie Mellon doctoral student Stan Jou mouthed words in Mandarin recently, electrodes on his face and throat sensed what he said and promptly translated it into English and Spanish.

The device is among several projects at the International Center for Advanced Communication Technologies.

Gadgets with limited capabilities could be sold commercially within a year, the center's director Alexander Waibel said. Complex translators will take longer. (AP)

Add Another Loss to Ravens' Woes

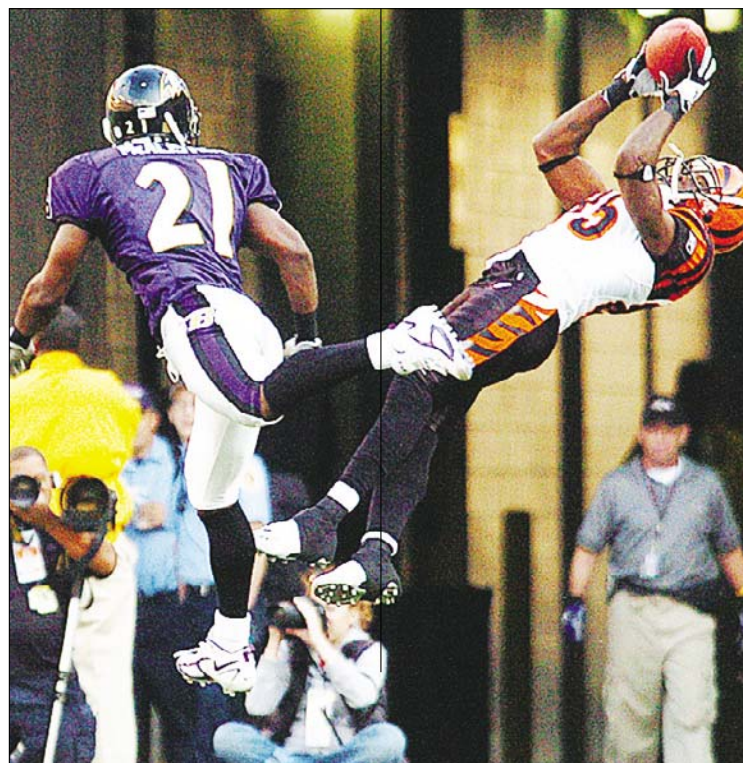

Baltimore can't get in the end zone during 21-9 loss to Cincinnati

RAVENS | It didn't take a brilliant mathematician to figure out why the Cincinnati Bengals beat the Baltimore Ravens.

Each team had three scoring drives Sunday. Cincinnati scored touchdowns; the Ravens settled for field goals. As a result, the Bengals remained in first place in the AFC North with a 21-9 victory.

Carson Palmer threw two touchdown passes and directed touchdown drives of 80, 31 and 91 yards for Cincinnati (7-2). Rudi Johnson ran for 97 yards and a score, Chad Johnson had five catches for 91 yards and the Bengals averaged 5.2 yards per offensive play.

Baltimore (2-6) got only 49 yards rushing from Jamal Lewis, averaged 4.1 yards per play and managed only three field goals by Matt Stover.

"I can do the math. You can't trade sevens for three, plain and simple," Ravens coach Brian Billick said. "If you get an opportunity to score or stop them, you can't trade touchdowns for field goals, and that's what we did today."

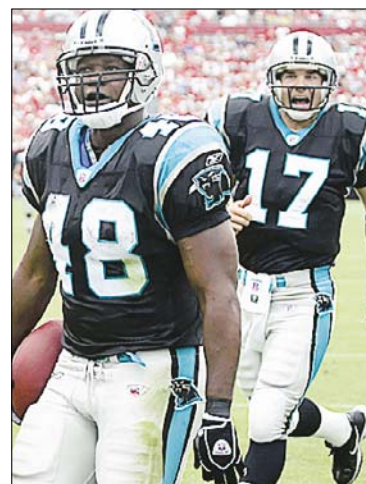

"That says a lot about this team and its offense," said Palmer, who went 19-for-26 for 248 yards. "We answer when we need to, even it's not always perfect and not always pretty."

It all added up to a feel-good victory for the surprising Bengals.

"I'm happy where we are at 7-2," Cincinnati coach Marvin Lewis said. "I don't think we had any major injuries today. When we come out of the bye, it looks like we should be at full strength."

Stephen Davis scored twice in the Panthers' 34-14 victory on Sunday.

Panthers Dominate The Bucs

NFL | The Carolina Panthers don't want to get ahead of themselves.

Five straight wins have propelled them to a 6-2 record and a tie for first place in the NFC South midway through the season, but coach John Fox and his players feel it's important to keep their strong start in perspective. "It's like how nobody remembers halftime scores. Same way with this season," Fox said after Sunday's 34-14 domination of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Stephen Davis ran for two touchdowns, Steve Smith caught his ninth TD pass and Chris Gamble scored on a 61-yard interception return to key the team's fifth straight victory in its division rivalry with Tampa Bay. The Bucs (5-3) lost for the third time in four games, falling out of a first-place tie with Carolina and Atlanta. (AP)

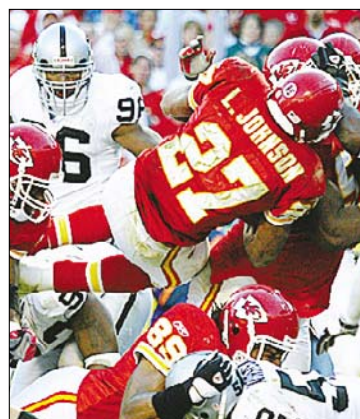

Chiefs' Gamble Pays Off in Victory

NFL | Dick Vermeil was going to be the biggest fool or the shrewdest gambler in the NFL.

With 5 seconds left, Kansas City trailed by three and had the ball on the Oakland 1 and Vermeil faced one of the toughest decisions of his long coaching career.

Have placekicker Lawrence Tynes — who's on a 13-for-13 streak — kick a virtually automatic field goal and force overtime? Or roll the dice and go for the win?

Vermeil went for the TD. Behind center Casey Wiegmann and 10-time

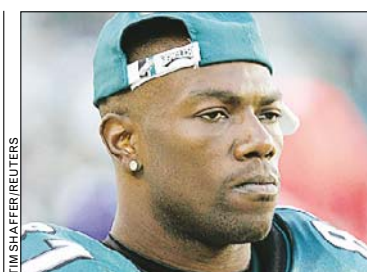

Larry Johnson leaps into the end zone to give the Chiefs a 27-23 win on Sunday.

Pro Bowl right guard Will Shields, Larry Johnson dived over the pile into the end zone for a 27-23 victory that brought a roar from the sellout crowd and left the emotional head coach in tears.

"Wow! I was scared. I just figured I'm too old to wait," said Vermeil, who recently turned 69. "It was not an impulsive thing. It was the right thing for us to do."

The sixth straight victory for the Chiefs (5-3) over the Raiders (3-5) kept them one game behind Denver in the AFC West and dealt Oakland a painful loss. (AP)

Owens was suspended on Saturday.

Owens in Fight Before Benching

NFL | Terrell Owens was involved in a locker-room fight with former teammate Hugh Douglas a few days before the All-Pro wide-out was suspended indefinitely by the Philadelphia Eagles.

On his radio show Sunday, Douglas said no punches were landed and he didn't discuss details of the incident. Douglas was released before the season started. He remained with the organization as a team "ambassador." ESPN.com reported the fight started when Douglas entered the team's training room Wednesday and said: "I know there are people in here faking injuries." (AP)

The number of college football teams remaining without a loss after Virginia Tech and UCLA went crashing out of the ranks of the unbeaten with lopsided losses on Saturday.

Sports

OUCH: Virginia Tech's Justin Harper looks down as the final seconds elapse in the Hokies' 27-7 loss to Miami on Saturday.

Va. Tech Stunned by Loss

Hokies fall to No. 8 after Hurricanes' drubbing

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Long after Virginia Tech absorbed a 27-7 beat-down from Miami, several Hokies wore the blank faces of disbelief.

Tight end Jeff King. Defensive tackle Jonathan Lewis. Defensive end Darryl Tapp. Seniors all, they never saw it coming.

But in their last go-round as collegians, Virginia Tech's leaders also remember how it was two seasons ago, when one disappointing loss became two, and then three, a late-season swoon that sent the 2003 seniors away with a bitter final taste of football.

These Hokies also were major parts of that team, and last season's, the one that won the Atlantic Coast Conference and restored the sense of pride that had been passed from class to class until the late-season faltering started in 2001.

And in their disappointment Saturday night, they all said "not us."

"This isn't the season," King said. "The season's not made to be one game and we're not going to make it one game. We're going to move on and get this one behind us. We have a lot to play for."

It's just a lot less than they were playing for before the loss.

The loss dropped the Hokies from No. 3 to No. 8, but the players said a lot can happen in the remaining weeks of the season to make their situation improve.

"It's going to add more gasoline to the fire as we sit there and watch film and think about the things we did. Hopefully we can back on the right track," Tapp said. HANK KURZ JR. (AP)

Miami Passes Undefeated Alabama

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Miami jumped over unbeaten Alabama, though just barely, and into the No. 3 spot in The Associated Press Top 25.

The Hurricanes (7-1) moved up two spots Sunday in the media poll behind No. 1 Southern California and No. 2 Texas, a day after their 27-7 victory at previously unbeaten Virginia Tech.

Alabama improved to 9-0 with a 17-0 win at Mississippi State, but stayed put in the Top 25. Only two points separate Miami (1,452) and Alabama (1,450).

In the USA Today coaches' poll, USC is No. 1 and Texas is second but Alabama is No. 3, 13 points ahead of No. 4 Miami.

After Miami and Alabama, LSU is No. 5. The Tigers play the Crimson Tide on Saturday in Tuscaloosa.

Penn State is No. 6 followed by Notre Dame and Virginia Tech, which dropped five spots to No. 8.

No. 9 Georgia and Ohio State fill out the AP's top 10. (AP)

THE AP TOP 10 Previously unbeaten and 7th ranked UCLA dropped to 14th :

- 2 Texas (9-0)
- 3 Miami (7-1)

- 6 Penn State (9-1)

FEELING BLUE: Chelsea lost 1-0 at Old Trafford against Manchester United on Sunday, snapping The Blues' 40-game unbeaten streak in the English Premier League.

Defense Keys Fast Start

Wizards open the year 3-0 for the first time since 1978-79 season

WIZARDS | Three numbers, written in black marker on the white board in the locker room, revealed the key to the Washington Wizards' 3-0 start.

Thirty-six percent. Thirty-eight percent. Thirty-one percent.

Those are the opponents' shooting percentages in the first three games.

Maybe the Wizards aren't piling up the points themselves, and maybe their rebounding and foul shooting aren't yet up to scratch, but Washington is finally taking its defense seriously.

"We've even got Gilbert Arenas playing some defense this year," center Brandon Haywood said with a smile.

The Wizards, coming off their first playoff appearance in eight years, improved on Saturday night to 3-0 for the first time since the Gilbert Arenas scores two of his 30 points in Saturday's win vs. Orlando.

1978-79 season, which was also the last time Washington played in the NBA Finals.

"Before everybody gets carried away ... ask yourselves: Who have the Wizards beaten so far?"

Tony Kornheiser, who is not keen on starting a Wizards' bandwagon just yet | Today in Sports

IN The Washington Post

"As long as we're winning," Jamison said. "Last year we did up-and-down the court, no defense. It's good to watch, but there were a lot of opportunities we let slip away. But if we've got to play 70, 80 games like tonight where the defense takes over, I'd rather take that. You don't put yourself in the hole. You don't rely on your offense throughout the whole game."

"It's early in the season," Washington coach Eddie Jordan said. "Probably the defense is ahead of the offense for most teams. You just have to take it as it comes."

The past two years, Peyton Manning, right, has been forced to congratulate Tom Brady, left, after the Patriots beat the Colts in the playoffs. They play again Monday.

Colts, Pats Have A Lot to Play For

Questions surround both teams entering Monday night contest

NFL | The Indianapolis Colts are still trying to prove they can beat a good team this season. The New England Patriots are still trying to prove that they are one.

The Patriots need to beat the Colts on Monday night to stay above .500 and win consecutive games for the first time all season. The inconsistency is uncharacteristic for the two-time defending Super Bowl champions, who won 21 in a row while taking the 2004 title and lost just two games in each of the last two seasons.

"It's been frustrating for everybody. This is the time of the year where we need to start doing that," Patriots quarterback Tom Brady said.

For the Colts, who ended their season in Foxborough in each of the last two years, and where Peyton Manning has never won, a victory would mean a four-game advantage over the Patriots in the race for home-field advantage in the AFC playoffs.

"When you're playing a team like New England, who is going to be there in the postseason, this is a great test to see what kind of team you are," Manning said. "When you play against a good team, you sort of see where you stack up. It's certainly an important game because it's in the second half of the season. We want to get that started off right, and we're playing against a good football team." JIMMY GOLEN (AP)

PAY DAY: Bart Bryant held off Tiger Woods to win the Tour Championship by six shots on Sunday, earning the $1.17 million prize - more than he had earned in his entire 18-year career.

Caps Hold Off Leafs, 5-4

CAPITALS | Alexander Ovechkin scored two goals to lead the Washington Capitals to a 5-4 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs on Sunday.

Ovechkin, the top pick in the 2004 draft, leads NHL rookies with 10 goals. He has 15 points in 14 games this season.

Bryan Muir had a goal and an assist, Matt Pettinger had a short-handed goal in the first period, and Brian Willsie scored his first goal in 11 games for the Capitals (6-8), who won their second straight game.

Jeff O'Neill scored twice and Kyle Wellwood had a goal and an assist for Toronto (7-6-2), which lost its third straight road game. Mats Sundin and Alexander Khavanov each added two assists.

Ovechkin's power-play goal with 4:59 left in the second period gave the Capitals the lead for good. He scored again during a third-period power play when his shot ricocheted off a defender's stick and into the net.

Olaf Kolzig had 25 saves for the Capitals. Toronto's Mikael Tellqvist, made 28 saves.

The teams meet again Tuesday in Toronto. (AP)

AUTO RACING | Carl Edwards just wouldn't be denied in Sunday's NASCAR Nextel Cup race at Texas Motor Speedway.

The 26-year-old wunderkind charged back from a late pit stop that dropped him to sixth place to pass Roush Racing teammate Mark Martin for the lead two laps from the end of the Dickies 500. It was his second straight victory and thrust the surprising Edwards into the battle for the series championship with two races remaining.

Edwards, who now has four victories in his first full season in Cup racing, jumped from a tie for fourth, 107 points behind, to solo possession of third, 77 behind Stewart.

Tony Stewart had a solid if unspectacular day. The 2002 champion finished sixth and saw his lead in the Chase for the championship drop from 43 points to just 38 over Jimmie Johnson, who managed to pass Stewart two laps from the end and finish fifth. (AP)

Revolution Stops The Fire to Reach MLS Title Game

SOCCER | Clint Dempsey scored four minutes into the game to lift New England over the Chicago Fire 1-0 on Sunday and help the Revolution advance to the MLS finals.

The Revolution will take on the Los Angeles Galaxy in the MLS Cup on Sunday in Frisco, Texas.

Matt Reis made seven saves to record his 11th shutout of the season in the Eastern Conference finals. The Revolution allowed 13 goals in 16 regular-season home games. Chicago had an apparent goal in stoppage time by Gonzalo Segares nullified by an offside call.

On Saturday, Landon Donovan scored twice to put Los Angeles in the MLS Cup with a 2-0 victory over the Colorado Rapids. (AP)

More Real Than Real

TV now depends on staging and scripts for its spontaneity

REEL LIFE | Radar magazine has an article titled "Rewriting Reality," in which staffers from such series as "Big Brother 2" and "Joe Millionaire" come clean on how scenes are scripted, footage contrived, sound bites scrambled and even alcohol infused to get the sought-after results from the performers.

But you don't have to be a fan of reality TV to prefer dramatics over actuality.

Take last night's episode of "The West Wing," which featured a live debate between its rivals for the presidency: Democrat Matt Santos (Jimmy Smits) and Republican Arnold Vinick (Alan Alda).

And recently, NBC's "Today" originated from a Covington, La., construction site, where host Matt Lauer set the scene: The president and first lady had joined Habitat for Humanity volunteers to "roll up their sleeves," "grab a hammer" and help build a new house.

Lauer raised the possibility that the Bushes' stopover might be little more than a post-Katrina photo op; the president chuckled at that idea. Soon after, he was pictured driving a nail into a wall panel.

SAY IT THE WAY WE REHEARSED IT: Soldiers based in Tikrit stuck to the script while answering the president's questions.

Mission accomplished?

Another presidential media event took place a couple of days later, but with a difference. For what was billed as an impromptu conversation with U.S. troops over in Iraq, the questions Bush would ask during his video-conference call were prearranged, along with the soldiers' answers. But, oddly enough, this dress rehearsal was made public.

Coaching the soldiers beamed onto a TV screen from Tikrit, Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Allison Barber stood in for Bush: "I'm interested in how your pre-election operations are going. Can you give me a quick update on what you've been doing for the last couple of weeks?"

At the same lectern a few minutes later, Bush asked, "One of the, you know, questions I have is about the pre-election operations, about what you've been doing, and what are — what's your strategy, and how do you think it's going for — to make sure the people have a chance to vote?"

"For all the hype about 'Desperate Housewives' and 'Lost,'" said Rob Corddry, senior political analyst on the phony newscast "The Daily Show" on one recent edition, "I still say the White House is one of the best scripted dramas out there. That new one, 'Commander in Chief' — total rip-off!" FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

Dose of Pixies' Magic

A DVD shows how essential the Boston post-punkers remain

MUSIC | The Pixies still matter. Big time.

Since they first took the stage in Boston during the Reagan era and achieved immortality of sorts by having "Where Is My Mind?" featured prominently in the film "Fight Club," the quartet has always managed to stand apart from its contemporaries.

The DVD of their kiss-and-make-up tour, "Pixies Sell Out 2004 Reunion Tour," couldn't have come at a better time.

The 142-minute DVD captures a band still in its prime. The signature songs are in abundance: "This Monkey's Gone to Heaven," "Velouria," "Bone Machine" and "Here Comes Your Man." So, too, is the primal energy that made the Pixies stand out back in their heyday.

The main portion of the DVD features 28 tunes captured at the Eurockeeennes Festival in Belfort, France, last year. There's 15 bonus tracks, too, from sets at the Fuji Rock Festival in Japan; Coachella in California; and the Move Festival in Manchester, England, among others.

Regardless of the venue, the sound, showmanship and performances are stellar. And watching the DVD is truly the next best thing to being there. MATT MOORE (AP)

The Pixies reunion meant good times ahead for the band's frustrated fans.

Terrorism Inside and Out

A documentary play lets Gitmo' detainees tell their own stories

STAGE | The entertainment world is increasingly the place to find out what's really going on in the larger world these days.

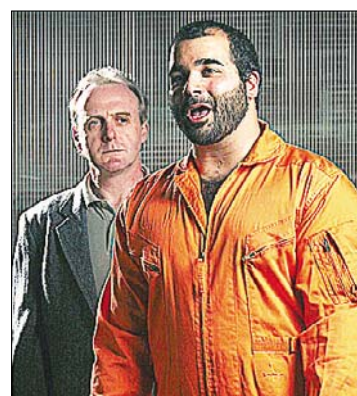

A new documentary drama, "Guantanamo: 'Honor Bound to Defend Freedom,'" shows that the abuses at Abu Ghraib were no fluke. Taken from prisoner letters, family interviews and government statements compiled by British journalist Victoria Brittain and South African novelist Gillian Slovo, the play tells the story of four British citizens imprisoned at Guantanamo who were interrogated and abused for years and eventually released without being charged. The story may be a news flash for some in the way it portrays detainee abuse as apparent U.S. policy.

One detainee, Jamal al-Harith (Andrew Stewart-Jones), a young man whose religious pilgrimage to Pakistan turned disastrous, tells his own story directly. The others include two Iraqi brothers in exile who are arrested on a business trip to Gambia and a young man traveling through Afghanistan who was held and then released by the Taliban, only to be imprisoned by American agents.

The latter three detainees' family members — including a father determined to find justice for his son — relate their stories, showing the impact on those at home. And lest audience members think the story is told from just one perspective, Donald Rumsfeld (Leo Erickson) adds his views.

For those interested in the subject, the International Spy Museum is holding a lecture, "Driving Force: Terrorist Motivation, Past and Present." Authors Albert Borowitz, who has written about terroristic motivation throughout history, and Marc Sageman, a CIA case officer and forensic psychiatrist, will discuss what makes terrorists tick.

Worries

Experts say disasters spark fears of more doom down the road

It sounds like an over-the-top, summer blockbuster. Or, worse yet, an apocalyptic network miniseries rolled out in time for sweeps.

A tsunami swallows a dozen countries and leaves 270,000 dead. On the other side of the world comes a wave of destructive hurricanes and deadly flooding. An earthquake kills 80,000 people. A raging war sends home 2,000 body bags. All the while, terrorism looms, the economy lags, gas prices soar and now a bird flu pandemic threatens.

It's the End of Days, the prophetic time of reckoning.

Or it's just the state of the world in 2005.

"Everybody's saying, 'What's next? The locusts?'" says Robert R. Butterworth, a Los Angeles psychologist specializing in trauma. "It's great for Hollywood writing. They're the only ones benefiting from all this gloom and doom."

No doubt, these are fearsome times. Each week seems to bring news of more devastation, more despair, more cause for anxiety. Are the subways safe, airports secure? What new wrath from Mother Nature awaits? And strung so closely together, what greater meaning lies beneath all this catastrophe and darkness?

"There's an underlying malaise in our country because of all the bad news," said Linda Sapadin, a New York-area psychologist who deals with fear and anxiety.

But there's a key word being uttered in these water-cooler chats of calamity and doom that psychologists and historians beg us to pause on: seems.

Indeed, it seems the world is unraveling. It seems these days are our darkest. But when the plagues swept over millions in Europe, when the Civil War tore the country in two, when a massive earthquake shook San Francisco in 1906, "I'm sure they were thinking the same thing, too," says Butterworth.

"Psychologically, when a bunch of things like this happen, we try to say there must be a purpose, rather than see them as a natural cycle of events," he said. "And that creates as much stress [as the events themselves]. But sometimes, there is no bigger picture there."

It can be affirming to question our spiritual and material lives in the context of such profound events. But we shouldn't allow self-reflection to leave us paralyzed with fear, psychologists say.

So how is it that we continue to whip ourselves into these frenzies? Why does it seem we've been clobbered with unprecedented amounts of tragedy, that there is more reason than ever to fear the world we live in?

Maybe our short-term historical memory is fuzzy, psychologists say. Or maybe we grew greedily accustomed to a quiet patch of years when the economy soared, dot-coms promised increased wealth and war was a distant memory. JOANN KLIMIEWICZ (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

A War to Save the Surf

Environment

Enthusiasts in Calif. fear a toll road will ruin a beloved coast

It's called Trestles. It means surfing.

For decades the surf break with the odd name south of San Clemente, Calif., has been legend, one that wave riders say is a creation of natural interactions between land and ocean that make it one of the best — if not the best — on the nation's coastline.

Now, they fear the forces of nature that sustain the "Yosemite of Surfing" will be overwhelmed by the forces of development, in the form of a planned toll highway.

Transportation officials say the road is needed to ease intense congestion on Interstate 5 between the suburban sprawl of Orange County and San Diego. Surfers say it will ruin Trestles by blocking sediment flows that make the surf breaks world class.

"That's where we go to feel the nature in our sport. There's no more nature left in surfing if they start screwing with Trestles," said Jericho Poppler, one of the sport's most decorated stars.

Activists have organized "paddle out protests" to raise their concerns about a proposed toll road's effect on the coastline.

The plan has made instant activists of many surfers, who have banded together for "paddle out protests" to protect Trestles, the only World Championship Tour stop in the continental United States. Opponents also have voiced their anger in more than 7,000 comments at public hearings last summer.

"There's no more nature left in surfing if they start screwing with Trestles."

300,000 drivers daily.

Traffic between Orange and San Diego counties is projected to increase by 60 percent in the next 20 years, mostly because of the addition of nearly 50,000 homes and 98,000 jobs in southern Orange County. If nothing is done, officials predict, the interstate will be gridlocked for up to eight hours a day by 2025 as it passes through some of Orange County's most famous beach cities.

"Every study that we've done shows that the vast majority of people want to see Foothill South built," said Clare Climaco, spokeswoman for the Transportation Corridor Agencies, which finances and builds Orange County's toll roads. "They'll take a tollway option because they know it will save them time."

Surfers and environmentalists, however, say the road will block sandy runoff from the San Mateo Creek watershed. The sand and cobbles from the watershed are what make the wave breaks at Trestles so good, they say.

Surfers and environmentalists would rather see improvements to I-5 than a new toll road.

Agency officials will choose one of the alignment alternatives by January, Climaco said. The project must still pass a number of federal hurdles but could be completed as early as 2010, she said.

Southpaw's New Pitch

Jeffrey Pattie's unique vision

"IT MEANS POWER and pow wow; it's Native American," said Jeffrey Pattie of Southpaw * Pawe-wa, his just-launched Spring 2006 collection of back-to-the-future shorts, tops, skirts and dresses aimed at free-spirited, nightlife-loving fashionistas. "It also means 'He who dreams and derives his power from visions,' which I think is very apropos."

Indeed. The warm and gregarious Pattie, a fashion industry vet of 22 years who made a name for himself as a high-end textile designer and owner of Southpaw, a couture vintage lending library that caters to designers and supermodels, has always wanted to design a collection of his own. It just took a while for Pattie to realize his dream because, he said, "I just thought it was too obvious."

The result, judging from a recent visit to Southpaw's showroom (all mirrored tables, silver dome lamps and 1970s rock posters), was definitely worth the wait. And the only obvious thing about Southpaw * Pawe-wa is that this stunning, ethereal collection was designed with oodles of passion by a man who is clearly something of a visionary himself (after all, not many folks were amassing world-class vintage collections 20-odd years ago, putting Pattie at the forefront of a now-thriving movement).

While Southpaw * Pawe-wa nods to the Edwardian era, 1920s, silent screen vamps like Theda Bara and Pattie's own 1970s Led Zeppelin/New York Dolls/David Bowie rock

Jeffrey Pattie's new Southpaw * Pawe-wa line will speak to hippie moms, free-spirited fashionistas and Air signs.

CREATIVE DECOR: A bank of freaky little dolls looks on in the background as a blousy, billowy top shows off its Bohemian charms and unique palette.

and roll leanings ("I used to go to all those concerts back then"), the collection feels truly original and of-the-moment, and has a refreshingly singular point of view.

"It's really about a strong, confident, non-conventional, bohemian woman," said Pattie, whose line was also inspired by fashionable friends such as Rachel Roy, Alexandra and Theodora Richards, and Stella McCartney. "And that spirit never dies."

Clothing-wise, this plays out in killer satin charmeuse bomber jackets with matching shorts or jumpsuits (some in sunny rainbow stripes, others in smoky solids with contrast piping), along with floaty chiffon dresses, slinky color block jersey separates, some of the coolest platform shoes we have ever seen, and gowns and blouses with seriously stunning prints, including "Smoke Rainbow and Mesh," an earthy, wood-like graphic inspired by Pattie's travels to Sedona.

Now all Pattie needs to have pop up are some buyers, which shouldn't be a problem given his fashion connections. Vogue, ElleGirl and WWD have already stopped by to see the collection, which will retail from $200 to $3,000, and both Zac Posen and Naomi Campbell told Fashion Wire Daily that they've seen the line and deem it "fabulous." Beauty

Healthy Glow in a Tin

Fake tans are absurd in the middle of winter; no one believes that you spent the last week in the Caribbean. But winter-pale skin needs a little something to prevent your face from wandering into Casper territory. Enter BENEFIT'S HOLLYWOOD GLO BODY LUSTRE ($26, Sephora). This "body finisher" looks entirely natural, unlike the many products that confuse "subtle shimmer" with "disco ball." This tester liked it best on cheeks, shoulders and cleavage. The only caveat is that it has a pronounced, albeit lovely, rose smell, so don't combine it with your favorite party scent.

Washington Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to talk about Madonna's hair, the CNN shakeup and more | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

I saw Madonna's new video and she is wearing Lisa Kudrow's hair from "The Comeback." The sad thing is that Lisa Kudrow was doing it to be funny about her character trying to hang on to her youth, and I have the feeling Madonna doesn't see the irony in it at all but thinks it makes her look young and hot.

I saw a snap of her in purple leotards from some trophy show and she was still wearing Lisa Kudrow's hair. But, in fairness, while her hair looked sad, her bod looked all young and hot.

So now that Aaron Brown is out, TV has taken the first step in removing the three most boring people on TV. Isn't this a momentous occasion?

Hey, I was a fan of Aaron Brown's show. I loved that he thought out loud sometimes and when he'd ask actual questions of the correspondents instead of just those pre-arranged "questions" that anchors always ask on-air reporters. I think someone even suggested that Brown's shows on Katrina verged on literature — which may have been going a bit too far, but still you get the point. It was different and, for someone who has to watch the news channels all day every day, "Different," slower, more thoughtful are all "terrific" at the end of the day. Anderson is just the latest "Scud Stud."

I just need to get this off my chest: I like the show "Freddie." I laugh out loud at it. I look forward to it. I think Brian Austin Green is funny. Thank you for the release, I feel much better now.

Glad to be there for you, but you need help, pookie — this show defines awful.

So is Jeff Probst leaving "Survivor" voluntarily or being voted off the island by Mark Burnett?

Do we care? Looks like he'll be GONE and that's all that matters. Hooray!

As a man, it's really intriguing to try and figure out women's reactions to the beautiful Jennifer Love Hewitt. Educated, feminist women resort to cattiness with talk of bimbo and being dumb, etc. I wish I knew what it all meant.

Probably the same thing it means when well educated men acknowledge that Brad Pitt is really attractive but dumb as hair and an actor of limited range. You know, someone can actually have breasts that large and still be a lousy actress and not so bright.

Fewer Seats Won't Fix Metro

WHOSE IDEA WAS IT to purchase Metro cars with fewer seats? If they were riders they would know the cause of the problem they seek to solve: When people stop and stand in the doorway of a train, it's not that there isn't room in the car; they want to be near the door so that they can get off first. It's as simple as that. They are selfish and do not care that others cannot board the train because they are blocking the door. To those behind Metro's push for fewer seats, I'd say this: Get out of your car. Ride the train before you make decisions that affect the elderly, infirm, pregnant or otherwise compromised riders who ride for long periods and are forced to stand. Please don't think that people selfish enough to deny access to the train would be willing to give a fellow passenger a seat.

Life Stories.

I just didn't like school at the time.
I just didn't seem to fit in with "the crowd."
I thought I could drop out and survive with a basic job.

Now that I'm 23, I know that I can't survive on my own on minimum wage. I need a high school credential.
Then, I want to go to a community college.

I want more out of life, and this is how I'll start getting it.
